

Practical learning. Stronger risk decisions.

Learning connected to the work you do

Our courses are self-paced online training. Learners work through the learning around their responsibilities, using realistic situations, practical assessment and feedback. We connect risk concepts with the decisions people make at work.

Who we serve

Individuals developing their practice, organisations developing their people, and insurance professionals helping the insured apply loss-prevention recommendations. Agreed programmes connect learning with roles and development needs.

Six initial offerings

The following page introduces our six courses. Enquire about the course or courses that fit your work. The Training Team sends the detailed course brochures and enrolment requirements before you decide to enrol.

Launch target

Knowledge Center launch target: 1 November 2026. Course availability, fees, learning commitment, assessment requirements, support and enrolment arrangements are confirmed in the written offer.

Six courses. A practical next step.

Risk Management for Frontline Supervisors

Recognise operational risks, apply controls and escalate concerns. Connect the learning with daily decisions while directing work and supporting a team.

Risk Management for Managers

Connect team objectives with risk decisions, control effectiveness and accountable action. Prioritise improvements and follow through on responsibilities.

Risk for the Executive

Bring risk insight into strategic choices, oversight and decisions shaping the business. Connect uncertainty, opportunity and ownership with leadership discussions.

Critical Control Management through Bow Tie Analysis

Understand credible loss scenarios and controls that prevent events or limit consequences. Connect control ownership and performance checks with practical improvement.

Business Interruption and Continuity Planning

Understand disruption exposure, recovery priorities and inputs for continuity planning. Connect assets, dependencies and operational costs with recovery decisions.

Advanced Enterprise Risk Management for Practitioners

Strengthen enterprise practice through connected assessments, governance and follow-through. Bring objectives, control effectiveness and accountable treatment into a coherent process.

Scope and learning deliverables

For an individual learner

The written course offer specifies access to assigned online materials, the learning outline, practical activities, assessment requirements and available support. Feedback and results relate to the agreed learning requirements. Completion recognition depends on meeting those requirements.

For an organisation

An agreed programme can include role-based learning plans, assigned courses, assessments and authorised learner-progress and results reporting. Managers can identify who needs support and discuss next steps. Reporting access and scope are agreed before commitment.

For insurers, brokers and underwriters

Where commissioned, learning helps the insured connect recommendations with practical application. Agreed workplace follow-up can show progress and remaining weaknesses. Reporting follows agreed permissions and supports risk dialogue.

Tailored support by agreement

Additional facilitated sessions, operational examples, workplace activities and follow-up are separately scoped. They complement self-paced online courses. The detailed brochure and written offer identify the materials, outcomes, delivery and support actually included.

Clear meaning of completion

Course completion alone does not establish workplace competence, professional registration or accreditation. Learning supports engineering, maintenance and supervision and does not guarantee fewer claims or losses.

Tell us what you need

Use Enquire about our courses on the website. Select one or more of the six courses and provide your name and email address, audience type, industry and years of industry experience. Organisation, role, telephone and questions help us tailor the response.

What you receive after an enquiry

A professional acknowledgement from the Training Team, the selected detailed course brochures and outlines, enrolment requirements and the next steps. We discuss suitability and availability before enrolment. An enquiry does not confirm a place.

Your details remain private

Enquiry details are used to respond and to understand grouped course interest by audience, industry and experience. They are not published as website comments. Enquiry trends are kept distinct from enrolments. Arrange a secure channel before sharing confidential company records.
